Passage 1

Where some see opportunity in unconventional recruiting, others just see wishful thinking. Sure, Zuckerberg and Jobs were college dropouts, but there's a reason they're in select company. There just aren't many like them. It's not as simple as saying lots of people who don't have a lot of schooling or who are never good at schooling will be great programmers. It is not that they have to go to university or go to a great program. But a lot of great programmers, even if they are self-taught, are people who end up excelling academically at some level.

That may sound democratic to recruit employees in a new way, but it's also a response to a hard-learned business reality: The battle for talent in Silicon Valley has gotten expensive. Monied players like Facebook and Google regularly poach each other's employees by offering big salaries and sweet perks. Smaller startups lure those same developers with promises of greater responsibility, interesting work and potentially lucrative stock options.

31. What is implied in the passage?

- (A) All college dropouts will be failures in the society.
- (B) Self-taught people have better academic performance.
- (C) Outstanding programmers are smarter learners.

- (D) Those people who don't have great schooling will be great programmers.
32. What does the author think about dropping out of college?
- (A) It's a guarantee to get a job in big companies such as Apple and Facebook.
(B) It's a wise decision because the dropouts can have more job opportunities.
(C) It is rare to have college dropouts as talented as Jobs and Zuckerberg.
(D) It is totally impossible for people to learn a lot by themselves.
33. What does the word "poach" mean?
- (A) To use someone else's ideas illegally
(B) To illegally catch or shoot animals on private land without permission
(C) To cook an egg in gently boiling water
(D) To persuade people to join another organization
34. What does the word "lucrative" mean?
- (A) sensible
(B) forever
(C) bountiful
(D) promotional
35. What does the "hard-learned business reality" mean?
- (A) The competitions for talent between companies are getting fierce.
(B) Facebook and Google can wait for the growth of their employees.
(C) Small companies prefer to hire employees who ask for lower salaries.
(D) The employees do not care about how much their salaries are.

Passage 2

Every day in the United States, thousands of people view rental advertisements that illegally deny housing to families with children and others protected by the federal Fair Housing Act. Although newspapers have been held liable under the Fair Housing Act for publishing discriminatory housing advertisements with statements such as "no kids," or "couples only," the publishers of similar ads on the Internet have not been held to the same legal standard.

In order to address this disparity in the law, which holds print advertisements and online advertisements to separate and unequal standards, the National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA) urges Congress to amend the Communications Decency Act.

The federal Fair Housing Act makes it illegal to make, print or publish or cause to be made, printed or published housing ads that discriminate, limit or deny equal access to apartments or homes because of race, color, national origin, sex, religion, familial status and disability.

In order to comply with the Fair Housing Act, newspapers utilize screening systems to keep advertisements containing discriminatory statements from being printed. However, a legal interpretation of the Communications Decency Act (CDA) holds that interactive Internet providers, like craigslist, are not publishers and, therefore, are not liable for violating the Fair Housing Act if discriminatory housing ads are published on their sites.

36. What is the purpose of the federal Fair Housing Act?
- (A) To protect disabled people from getting hurt.
(B) To ensure the fairness of housing to all families
(C) To discriminate the families with children
(D) To sell houses at higher prices.
37. What is wrong with the housing ads with the statements like "no kids" or "couples only"?

- (A) They are discriminatory.
  - (B) They care about fairness of housing.
  - (C) They charge too much money for their services.
  - (D) They sell limited editions.
38. Why does the National Fair Housing Alliance (NFHA) urge Congress to amend the Communications Decency Act?
- (A) To make sure the publishers of the housing ads on the Internet will not be punished for the ads with discriminatory words
  - (B) To apologize to the Internet providers of housing ads
  - (C) To show their power over the Internet providers of housing ads
  - (D) To ensure the law can be applied to newspapers and internet providers equally
39. What do newspapers do to prevent discriminatory statements?
- (A) They print housing ads by themselves.
  - (B) They screen the discriminatory words.
  - (C) They stop publishing all housing ads.
  - (D) They charge house owners very high prices.
40. According to the Communications Decency Act, at present
- (A) interactive Internet providers do not use discriminatory words.
  - (B) interactive Internet providers have to be responsible for the discriminatory words they use.
  - (C) interactive Internet providers do not have to be punished for using discriminatory words.
  - (D) interactive Internet providers are not legal agencies.
